BLACK PRIDES: DOES GREEN KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BLACK AND WHITE?

by Jasmyne Cannick

The Miami Herald recently ran an article entitled "Gay Pride Celebrations: the Nation's Top 10 Festivals are Diverse and Delightful." Unfortunately there was nothing diverse or delightful in its choices. Topping the list of most festive gay pride celebrations were New York City, San Francisco and Long Beach, California. However, their equally popular and festive counterparts were nowhere to be found on the list.

As Black gay pride organizers scramble to provide comprehensive cultural celebrations for their thousands of anticipated guests this year, the Herald's top ten list was a slap in the face, and further feeds into the notion that gay and now gay pride is white.

The International Federation of Black Prides is home to 25 Black gay pride celebrations, including Toronto and South Africa. These cultural celebrations are flocked to each year by thousands of Black same-gender loving persons are all over the country, some with a cult following. The three largest and highly attended celebrations include D.C Black Pride celebrating 15 years Memorial Day weekend, At the Beach Los Angeles Black Pride celebrating 17 years Independence Day weekend and Atlanta Black Pride celebrating 9 years Labor Day weekend.

These celebrations each typically bring in around 10,000 people that are culturally diverse, socially active, event loyal, frequent travelers and beauty, health, fitness and fashion conscious. Given all of these facts, why then do Black prides still receive less financial support than their white counterparts?

A look at the websites of the Herald's top ten picks shows financial support from Delta Airlines, Travelocity, Absolut Vodka, Gay.com, Showtime, Starbucks, Bud Light, Bank of America, PlanetOut.com, Hertz, Virgin and more. But take a closer look at who is sponsoring Black pride celebrations.

Black pride organizations cater to the Black gay community and unfortunately, this community is still being affected in large numbers by the HIV/AIDS epidemic. So it's only obvious that pharmaceutical companies and AIDS service organizations would want to sponsor events where they can target a high number of Black gays with their message. However, there is so much more to the Black gay community than HIV/AIDS prevention. We dine out, read the newspaper, watch television, travel, buy clothes, and are included in the overall contributions of African-Americans to the U.S. economy.

In addition, it's not just at the corporate level that companies do not sponsor Black gay pride celebrations. Many elected officials shun off Black pride celebrations to their health deputy's (HIV/AIDS) instead of to their city's cultural affairs office where these celebrations should be getting support from as well. Like Black film festivals that highlight Blacks in the filmmaking business, Black gay pride celebrations are cultural events that celebrate the uniqueness of being Black and gay,

So that should open up a plethora of sponsorship opportunities for Black gay prides, not only from the companies listed above but from Viacom who owns Black Entertainment Television, TVOne, RadioOne, Ebony, JET, ESSENCE, Walmart, Target, NAACP, Urban League, music labels, and other businesses that thrive off of Black dollars.

With new networks HERE and LOGO targeting gay viewers, they too could benefit from marketing to Black gays at pride celebrations. Without the support of the Black gay prides last year, LOGO's Noah's Arc, America's first Black gay television series debuting in September, would probably still be a straight to DVD production.

I once had a corporate marketing executive tell me that they sponsored a Black film festival and sponsored a gay pride celebration so they didn't see the need to sponsor a Black gay pride. In their mind, Black was straight and gay was white and there was nothing in between. Sadly, that's the misinformed thinking of many corporate executives when it comes to marketing.

The irony in all of this is that at most white gay pride celebrations, you see about a handful of Blacks. In a recent poll, Black gays were asked, if given a choice would you attend a white pride celebration or a Black pride celebration. An overwhelming number of those polled indicated that they would attend their Black pride celebration.

If white Conservative Christian evangelicals can see the value in marketing to straight Blacks regarding gay marriage, why can't companies see the value in marketing to Black gays?

Take me for example. I am a 27-year-old Black lesbian. I listen to National Public Radio everyday. I have a subscription to my local daily newspaper, the Advocate, Black Enterprise, and ESSENCE Magazine. I watch Desperate Housewives every Sunday and pick up my weekly Black newspapers every Thursday and Friday. I shop faithfully at Lane Bryant and Ashley Stewart. I find myself in an airport traveling once or twice a month and I vote regularly.

I think quite a few companies would benefit from marketing me and others like me.

So while, the Miami Herald probably boosted the incoming sponsorship dollars for the 10 prides it listed in its article, it did a disservice to people of color gay prides across the nation and further fed into corporate America's notion that gay is white.

At 27, Jasmyne Cannick is a member of the National Association of Black Journalists, a board member of the National Black Justice Coalition, a Black gay civil rights organization and co-producer of the new cable series Noah's Arc, America's first Black gay series. A Los Angeles native, Jasmyne is a public relations and communications strategist who is pursuing her long-term interest in public policy and political activism.

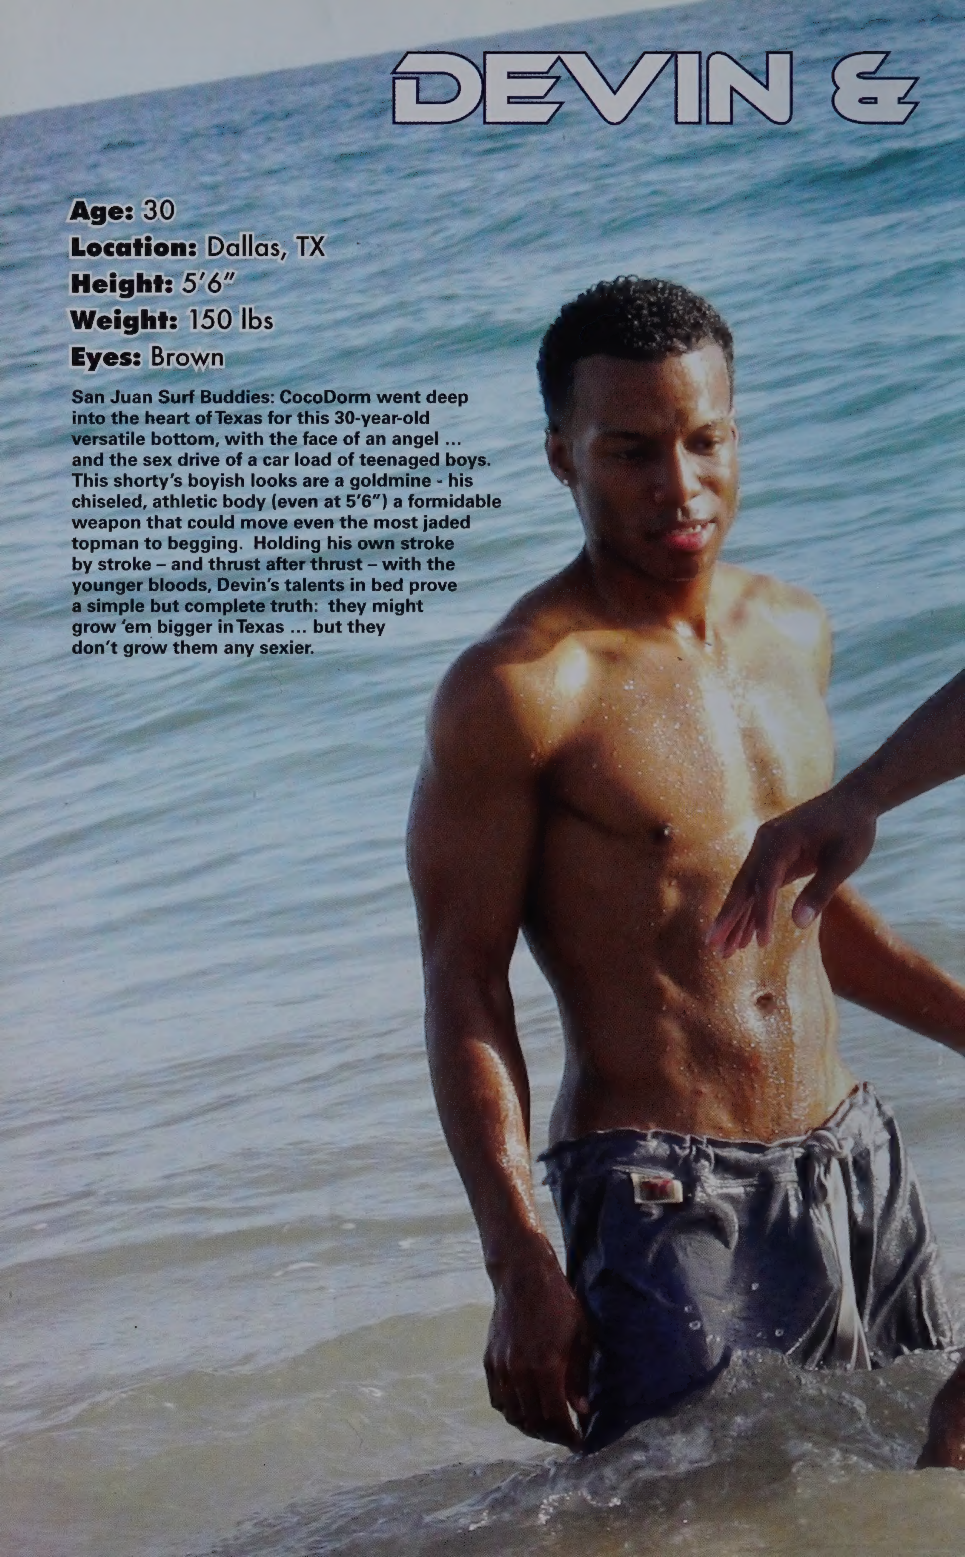
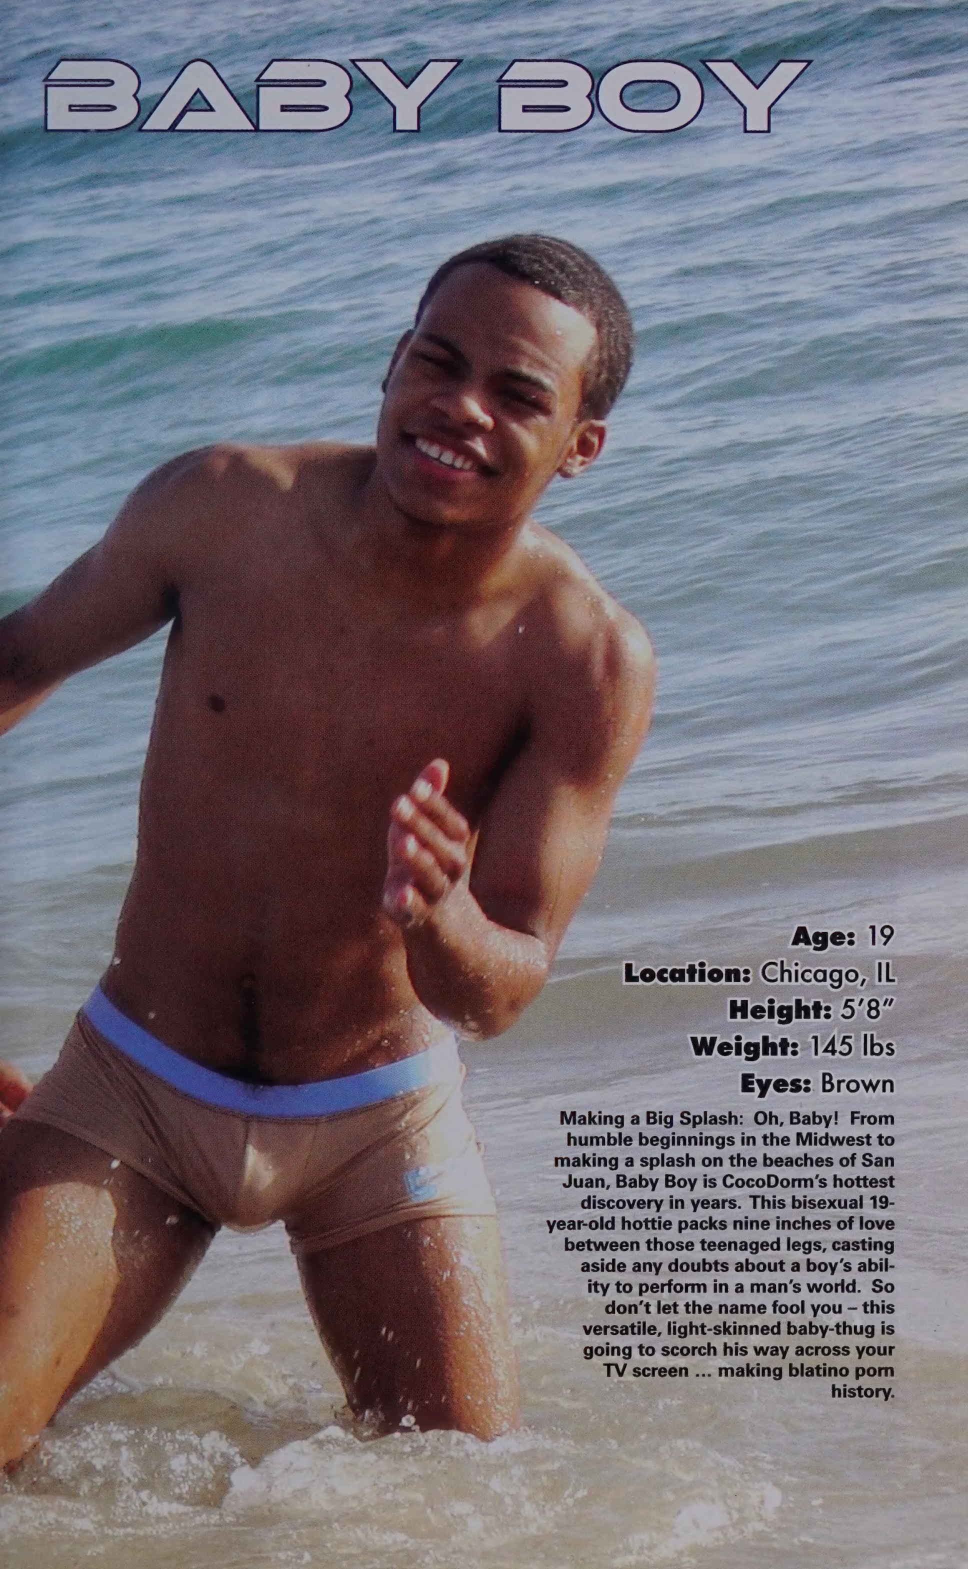
DEVIN &

Age: 30
Location: Dallas, TX
Height: 5′6″
Weight: 150 lbs
Eyes: Brown

San Juan Surf Buddies: CocoDorm went deep into the heart of Texas for this 30-year-old versatile bottom, with the face of an angel … and the sex drive of a car load of teenaged boys. This shorty's boyish looks are a goldmine - his chiseled, athletic body (even at 5′6″) a formidable weapon that could move even the most jaded topman to begging. Holding his own stroke by stroke – and thrust after thrust – with the younger bloods, Devin's talents in bed prove a simple but complete truth: they might grow 'em bigger in Texas … but they don't grow them any sexier.

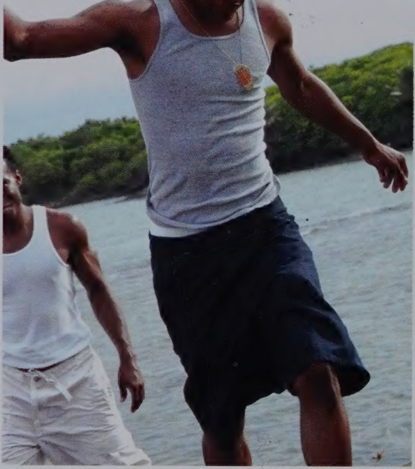


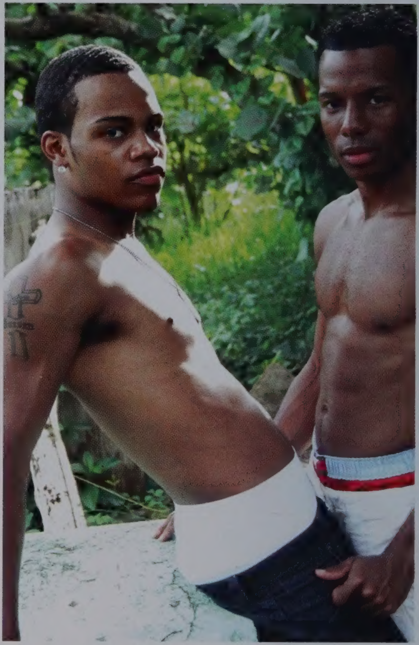
BABY BOY

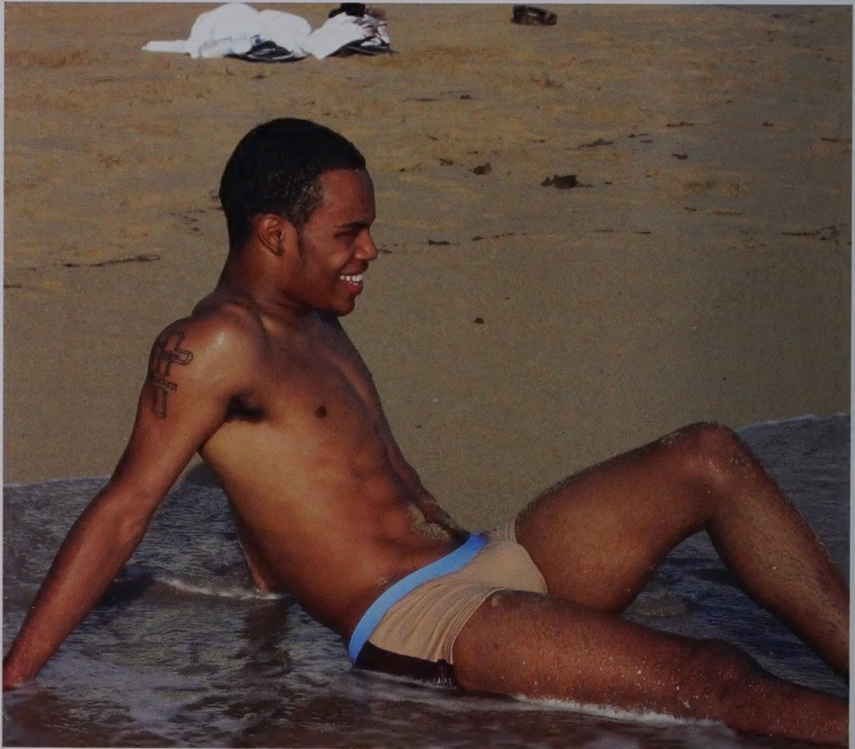


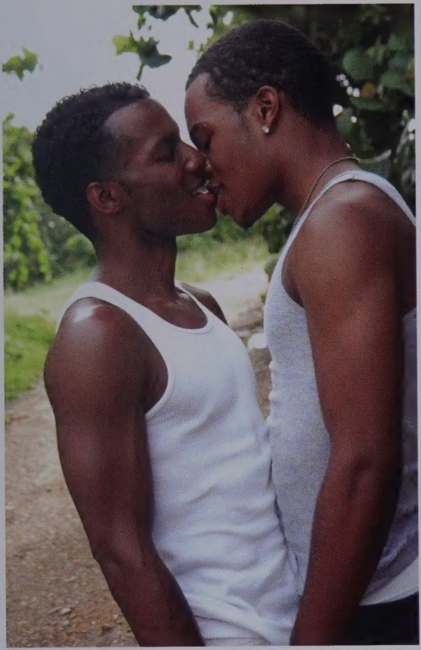
Age: 19
Location: Chicago, IL
Height: 5'8"
Weight: 145 lbs
Eyes: Brown

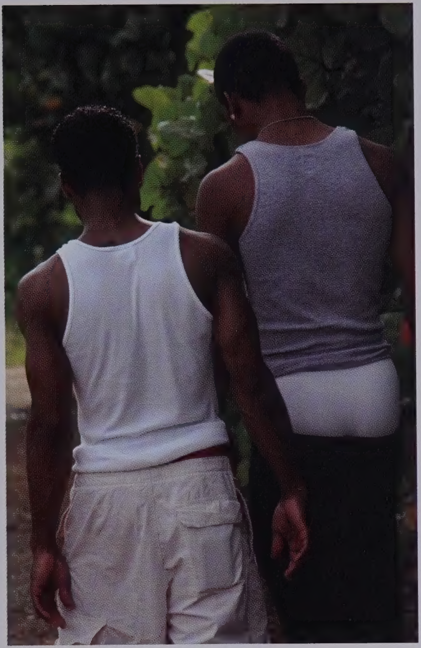
Making a Big Splash: Oh, Baby! From humble beginnings in the Midwest to making a splash on the beaches of San Juan, Baby Boy is CocoDorm's hottest discovery in years. This bisexual 19-year-old hottie packs nine inches of love between those teenaged legs, casting aside any doubts about a boy's ability to perform in a man's world. So don't let the name fool you – this versatile, light-skinned baby-thug is going to scorch his way across your TV screen ... making blatino porn history.

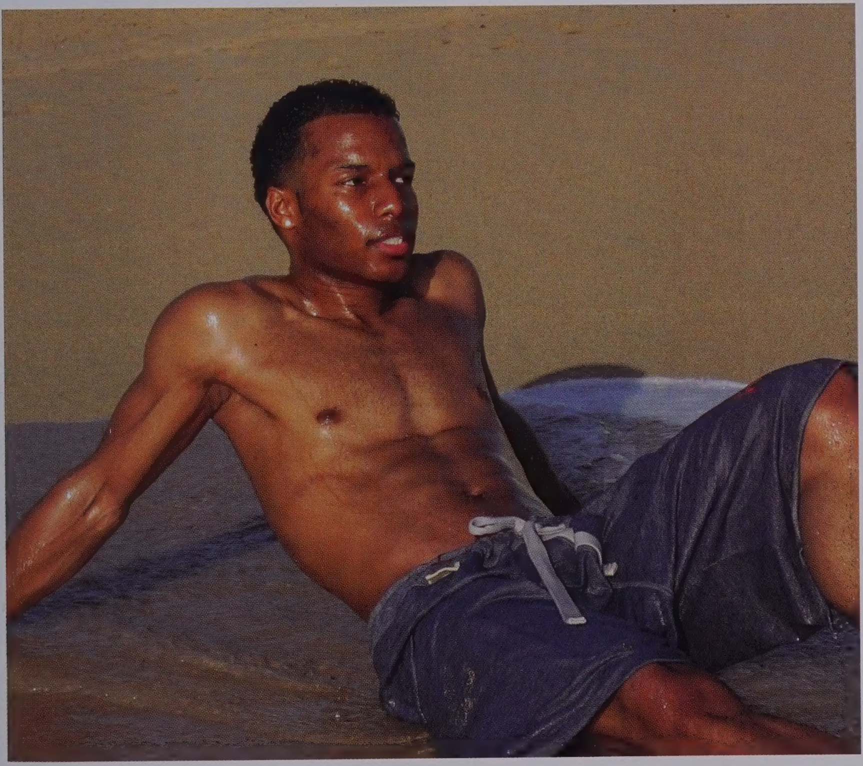








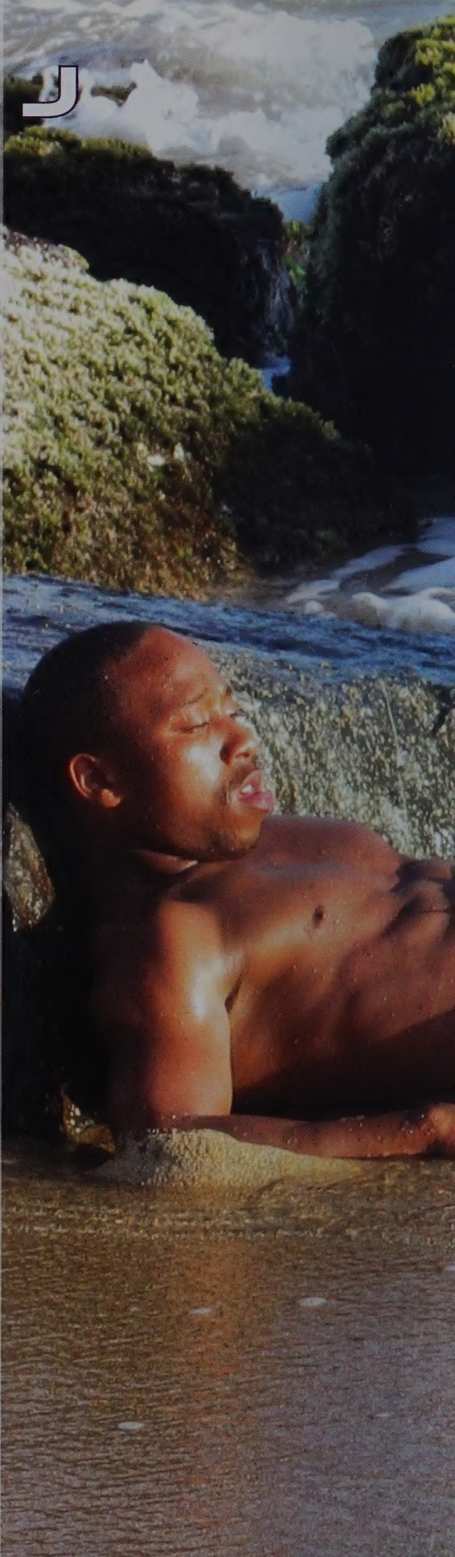




SHORTY J

Age: 19
Location: Philly, PA
Height: 5'2"
Weight: 140 lbs
Eyes: Brown

A golden body on the golden sands of San Juan: Very good things often come in small packages, and Shorty J – at only 5'2" – is living proof. Pure muscle from head to toe, Shorty stays in fantastic shape with the help of his exclusive exercise regime: using his 9" of uncut beef to jack-hammer the sexiest of blatinos ... before hosting a private party in his own booty, as well. Discovered in Philadelphia, the City of Bruthaly Love, Shorty J attacks the male body like a starving man at an all-you-can-eat-buffet – with raw, animalistic hunger. And for this powerhouse of sex – with, incidentally, a butt worth writing poetry about – and we wouldn't have it any other way.



KRAVE

Age: 20 Location: New York, NY Height: 6'2"
Weight: 190 lbs Eyes: Brown

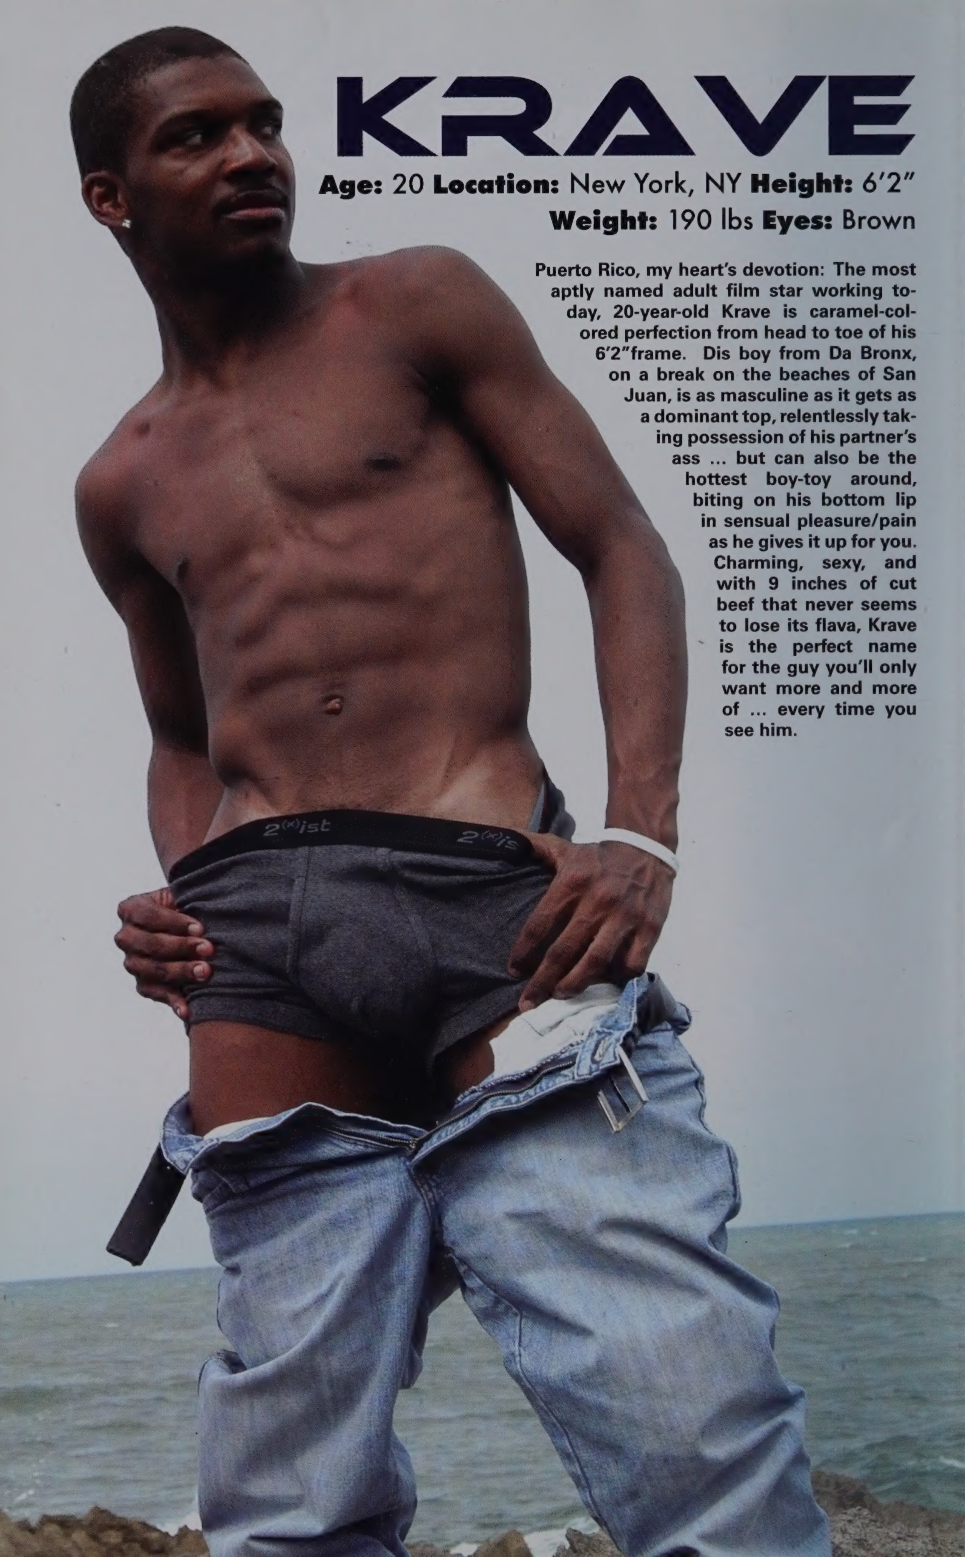
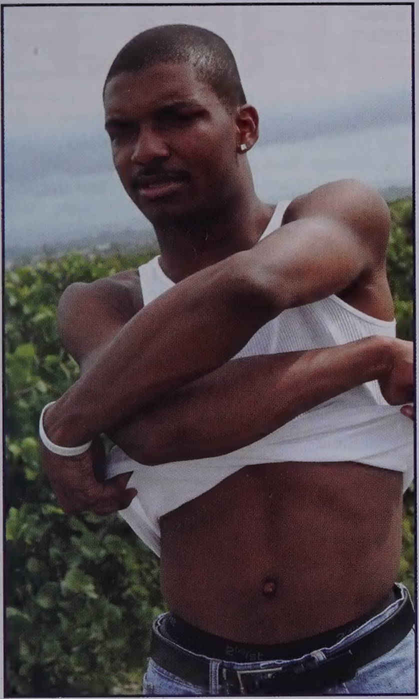
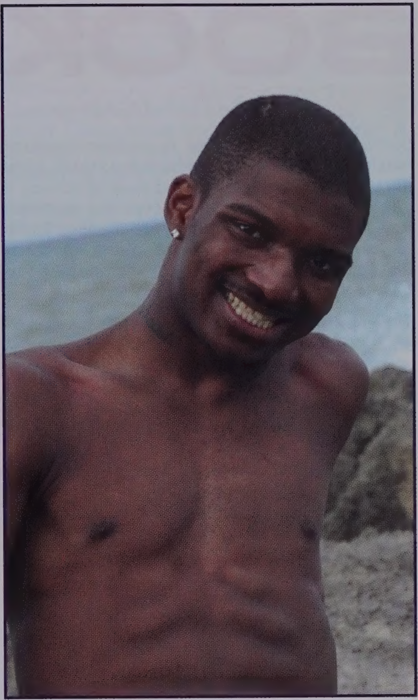
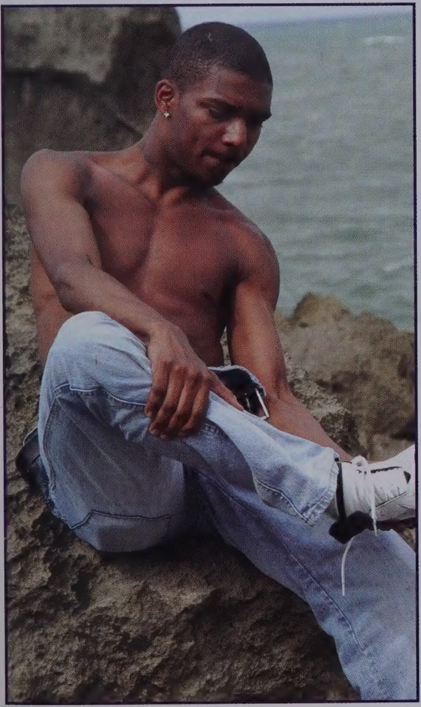
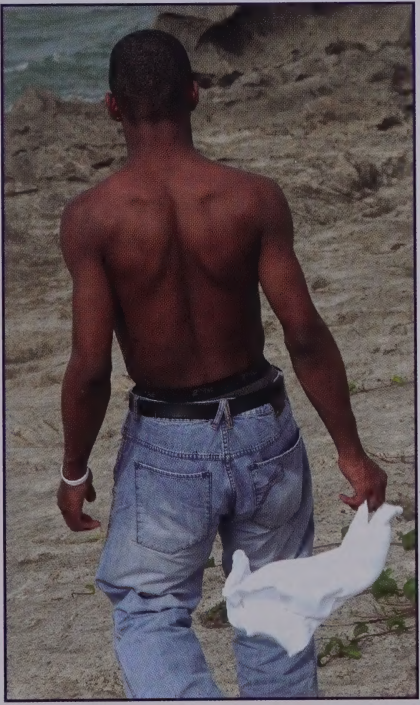
Puerto Rico, my heart's devotion: The most aptly named adult film star working today, 20-year-old Krave is caramel-colored perfection from head to toe of his 6'2"frame. Dis boy from Da Bronx, on a break on the beaches of San Juan, is as masculine as it gets as a dominant top, relentlessly taking possession of his partner's ass ... but can also be the hottest boy-toy around, biting on his bottom lip in sensual pleasure/pain as he gives it up for you. Charming, sexy, and with 9 inches of cut beef that never seems to lose its flava, Krave is the perfect name for the guy you'll only want more and more of ... every time you see him.











BOOKSHELF

BY ROD MC

Summer is just about over. In another month or two, we'll be ready to turn back the clocks, bundle under a sweater and head back to school. If you've been playing hooky over the summer, now it's time to catch up on your reading. There is a new crop of gay writing that showcases Black and Latino characters that guaranteed to be informative, fun ... and sexy.

They say that you can't judge a book by its cover, but long ago publishers realized a catchy, memorable cover helps to move inventory. Hung: A Meditation on the Measure of Black Men in America ($23/Doubleday) will have no trouble standing out on the shelves; the book cover features a handsome, shirtless brotha and a ruler—so the subject matter is more than obvious. Writer/critic Scott Poulson-Bryant essays the myth of the Mandingo, the super-hung, hyper-sexualized Black man. Society's long-standing obsession with the sexual prowess of Black men has created a pervasive—at times, deceptive—influence on self-esteem and the perceptions by others.

Poulson-Bryant is a senior editor at America, but many may remember him as a founding editor of Vibe. Thankfully, Hung encompasses that same pop sensibility; it's neither heavy-handed nor fluffy. The book is part memoir of his own sexual coming of age, anecdotes from friends and interview subjects, and a clever deconstruction of the sexuality of the Black male found in film, television, books, sports, art, music and porn.

Hung: A Meditation on the Measure of Black Men in America will be debut in October. For more, visit the author's website at spbq.blogspot.com.

Down for Whatever ($20/Kensington Books) was published in July, the first novel written by Los Angeles-based Frederick Smith. The book is creating a buzz from coast-to-coast for two reasons. One, it's the first Black, gay novel from a publishing house known for delivering gay, romantic comedies. Second, critics and readers are falling in love with the engaging, diverse cast of non-stereotyped characters.

This is the story of a contentious group of four L.A. friends. Two are Black, the other two are Latin; it's peppered with Spanglish and the language of the hood. Of the four, Keith is the most accomplished, wealthiest and ... the loneliest. The Stanford grad and Michigan transplant is frustrated that he "can't even get a Black man to look his way." Roommate Tommie is a former R&B star who is down on his luck and on the down low. Keith's best friend Marco Antonio is a social worker torn between his traditional family and a hot soap actor who could charm his way into Fort Knox. Then there's Rafael. Sigh. Young and gorgeous in a town where "everybody loves Latinos." How do we describe him? Retail queen-slash-go-go-boy- slash-serial heartbreaker who is trouble with a capital "T." His motto is "sex with gorgeous people, wherever I want, whenever I want." Rafael does get it — in clubs, with married men, high school boys working at 7-11.

The novel is marketed as a Queer As Folk meets Sex and the City meets Waiting to Exhale. Sure, we could say that if you needed to give a sound bite to Smith's work, but his novel is much more than that. Down for Whatever provides a much-needed glimpse into the sexual and racial politics within the LA's gay community. This isn't the Los Angeles familiar to many readers of gay fiction. The characters almost never go into West Hollywood; there are no airbrushed, steroid-enhanced circuit boys; and the characters are not millionaires or fabulous industry queens. Instead, these men have car trouble, flirt with each other's men, have affairs, get fired, fall in and out of love, party at Catch One instead of Rage. Frederick Smith's debut novel is real, delightful and witty.

Down for Whatever is available in bookstores and online. Go to fredericksmith.net to download a sample chapter and order a copy.

Rashid Darden is a new name—probably unfamiliar to many, but that will change. The Georgetown-educated, Washington D.C. native son is celebrating the recent paperback publication of his first novel, Lazarus. It's a rich and diverse story, populated by eclectic characters, international college students, poets, student activists and intimidating fraternity brothers. Undeniably, the work is quite personal. The author is a writer, poet, teacher and frat brother. All of this experience is combined into a wonderful literary stew that becomes comfort food for the soul.

Lazarus is set at the fictional Potomac University in Washington DC, probably a composite of Georgetown and American Universities. Student NAACP leader Adrian Collins is one of the BMOCs—big men on campus. The 19-year-old sophomore is coming to terms with his own sexuality and becomes involved in his first relationship. His boyfriend is senior Savion Cortez, a Dominican hottie and the campus poet. Besides their warring personalities—Adrian is subdued and deliberate, Savion much more impulsive and argumentative—a major issue challenges their relationship and threatens to expose their love: Adrian wants to pledge Beta Chi Phi, the top Black fraternity.

DOWN FOR WHATEVER

Darden's prose is deliberate and simple, among the reasons why his work was compared to comfort food. The love scenes are brief but tender; the writer is not given to gratuitous intimacy, and perhaps we could have read a little more. But the relationship between Savion and Adrian is nerdy-sexy: they are intellectuals, read Niki Giovanni to each other and at times their dialogue is exquisite.

Also highly revealing is the detailed look at hazing and the fraternity induction process. Darden details many of the things that we have heard about: discipline, hazing, paddling, homophobia and homoeroticism. There's much more of this than sex between the two main characters ... and that's definitely off the hook.

Lazarus is available in bookstores and online. Point and click to oldgoldsoul.com for a sample chapter and ordering information.

Rod Mac is a writer, television producer and (hopefully) will soon finish writing his first novel. Read him at rodonline.typepad.com.
